

South Carolina Midlands EMS Management Association is the Regional Emergency Medical Services office for the fifteen counties of the Midlands. It is a coordinating agency working in cooperation with the South Carolina EMS Advisory Council for manpower development and training, EMS system development, review, and evaluation for emergency health care providers.

The 1987 Paramedic Class consists of 28 Emergency Medical Technicians from 9 Emergency Care providers. These 28 students completed 420 hours of training in advanced cardiac life support, pharmacology, advanced trauma care, and other aspects of emergency pre-hospital health care, qualifying them for paramedic certification. Their training consisted of classroom lectures and supervised practice in emergency departments, coronary care units, obstetric units, neonatal units, and ambulances. Students were taught and supervised by Emergency Department physicians from Richland Memorial Hospital, experienced Registered nurses from the various hospital units, and Paramedics from the various ambulance units.

The course's Medical Director is John McMahon, M.D., S.C. Midlands EMS Medical Director, and the course's Coordinator is Janice Grant Johnson, R.N., S.C. Midlands EMS Training Director. The Executive Director of S.C. Midlands EMS Management Association is H.O. "Butch" Carter.
